The first line offers the option to choose a meal plan suitable for either an individual or a family. This selection impacts the quantity of food and further customization options in subsequent steps.

Moving to the second line, users are prompted to indicate any allergies they may have. This information is crucial in ensuring their safety and well-being.

In the third line, users can select specific products, fruits, or vegetables that are known to trigger allergic reactions. Our program takes these choices into account and adjusts the displayed food options accordingly, excluding any items containing the selected allergens.
